

Excerpt from Letters on the Indian System: Missionary Paper Under this programme, I do not believe an open outbreak upon the whites was intended. The first attack was to be made upon the farmer Indians about Yellow Medicine, and if extended to the whites it would be Only through the protection of their Farmer Sioux. The conduct of a few youngsters at Acton, however, precipitated the outbreak and changed its character. The goods and ammunition necessary to their success, which they at One time intended to buy with their annuities, they now determined to take by force, and the massacre Of the traders became a necessary preliminary to the accomplishment of that Object.
