Handling the trauma of rape if you're a woman is hard enough but what's even harder is being raped by another female. How do you wrap your mind around that? If you've ever been the victim of female on female rape you know how people look at you. How do you handle the trauma of rape if you're a woman is hard enough but what's even harder is being raped by another female. How do you wrap your mind around that? If you've ever been the victim of female on female rape you know how people look at you if they hear the story. Somehow it was your fault and you know it because you are gay or worse a tease. When you think about rape or a sexual assault many of the horrific tales people tend to hear about have to do with rape involving a man attacking a woman. But that's not always the case because females do attack other females and it happens more than you think. Just like male on male rape females who rape other females leave them to suffer alone in silence and in fear.
