

The Riverdale Chronicles

Golf short stories. A high-tech tycoon who plays golf with a half-century-old set of clubs a trial lawyer who claims that golf is a public nuisance a radio shock jock who seeks social acceptance for himself and his morning menagerie by joining the country club set these and many other characters are the literary denizens of the Riverdale Golf and Country Club, the fictional setting for this collection of humorous short stories by Charles F. Rechlin. Organized around standard golf-related topics such as The Players, The Equipment and The Rules this collection tackles themes traditional to fine sports literature, using the characters and setting of the stories to raise such universal human issues as friendship, charity, aging and coping with change.
